Red Five to Discuss Privacy Security at Jackson Hole Center for Global Affairs

McLean, Va. (April 12, 2017) – Red Five, a leading provider of proactive solutions for critical security challenges, announces that company President and CEO Kris Coleman will present at the esteemed Jackson Hole Center for Global Affairs on April 13, 2017, in Jackson Hole, Wyoming.

Coleman will lead a roundtable discussion entitled “The New Frontier: Privacy In A Hyperconnected World,” addressing the convergence of privacy and criminal elements, data breaches, the proliferation of the dark web and proactive measures for protecting privacy.

“It’s an honor to be asked to present at JHCGA to a respected audience of some of the country’s most innovative thought leaders,” said Coleman. “We work closely with companies and families around the globe on security strategy and I’m excited to share our message.”
